"What is it worth, then, to be in love when a man is not in love, and not even in the same place?"

And then, as they were going, they came to a point where the road forked. One road went straight ahead to the city, the other took them into the wilderness.

"Where do you want to go?" asked the man.

"I don't care," said the woman. "It's all the same to me."

He looked at her, and she looked back at him, and then they both burst out laughing, for they had caught only a glimpse of each other in the mirror of their own faces.
