En is het niet ook wel toegestaan om dicht in de buurt te blijven en soms een lichtje te branden aan een plaats, waar kinderen over het water glijden? De gezichten de kinderen, die nacht zijn voortdurend veranderend, het leven in de schemering en dansen op de bovenaardse wereld als een dansende lichtbron.
As soon as the piper rose off the sea, and he reached the shore of Mr. O'Malley's field, the sun was setting in the west. The sea was calm, and the waves were breaking gently on the shore. The piper began to play his pipe, and the music echoed through the valley. The wind blew softly, and the trees swayed gently to the rhythm of the music. The piper played for hours, until the sun disappeared behind the mountain peaks.

As the darkness fell, the piper began to play more slowly, and the music became more melancholic. The stars shone brightly in the night sky, and the piper played until the moon rose above the mountain peaks. The music表达了 the deep emotions of the piper, and the audience was moved to tears. As the piper played, the wind blew softly through the trees, and the music blended beautifully with the natural sounds of the forest.

The piper played until the dawn broke, and the sun rose above the mountain peaks. The music faded away, and the piper packed up his pipe and his bagpipes. He walked back to the sea, and the sun rose higher in the sky. The piper turned and looked back at the field, and a tear fell from his eye. He knew that he would never play again, but the memories of the music would stay with him forever.
